EACH OTHER, BY GOSH!

Philadelphia, Sept. 30. - There is no eugenic reason why first cousins and even brothers and sisters should not marry, in opinion of M. J. Greenman, director of the Wistar Institute of Anatomy at Univ. of Penn. After experiments with rats, covering four and a half years, by Dr. H. D. King of that department, Director Greenman has arrived at the conclusion that consanguinity not only has no injurious effects upon offspring of such unions, but woul tend to produce types larger and more efficient physically than those which result from marriages now universally recignized.

"For twenty-one generations," Dr. King said, "I have intermarried a brother and sister rat. The result was that I got a rat larger and better physically in every way than the first onces. A rat is a mammal and man is a mammal; therefore it is not too much to think that the same principle can be applicable to each."
